a word of advice to clarify our course: do not seek carefree dancers, inebriated revelers, sportive youngsters you will not find them for you see, my friends, we can only prescribe the formula—you alone must start the band.

as the music progresses you will fill the steps: it is in you

yes! you
it all!

Every day is a new experience, another chance to be closer to understanding. Each of us must become more separate in her path then, but with a common goal ahead. And so it is in these years spent together with one special group of young women, young people, our senior class. Of course, we find amidst ourselves those whose road especially stands out, those who possess such qualities which bring our class closer together, and so then, closer to a more complete conception of existence.

Some people never seem to lose in the game of team spirit. We look up to Nancy Wittig as an example of undying sportsmanship, a contest she can never lose.

Sometimes days arrive when we find few of us can muster the energy to carry on, and spirit is at a minimum. We depend upon others to shoulder perhaps more than their share of the burden to see us through low as well as high times. Jeannie Curtin is one such person who, through thick and thin, strives keep harmony in the class.

Many times each of us has found instances when things never quite come into focus and life seems only to present problem after problem. We have Mary Reedy to thank for always having a smiling face and a friendly attitude to help us through these days, and to add joy to all others.

A feeling of true unity is necessary for such a group to survive four years of sharing activities, classes, friendships, and acquaintances. We have the fortune of knowing Maureen Hall whose enthusiastic spirit jars us out of any disinterested apathy and swings us into her contagious mood of uncontrollable excitement.

It is said that to imitate another is the highest compliment one can pay. To be able to follow another's lead yet all the while sacrificing none of one's own identity is to commend such an influential person. We then honor Tracy Downer as our chosen leader.

In a situation where academic excellence is a valuable asset, we look up to those whose talents prove to be exceptional. Not simply especial talent, but generosity in sharing one's knowledge do we emphasize. As our representative of such scholarship we, therefore, compliment Dorothy DeClue.

Four years often can seem like forever to some of us impatient to explore more novel facets of life. Adding sparkle and perhaps a touch of the absurd, Linda Barnes mixes her potions of madness and intoxicates each one of us every now and again just to keep us on our toes.

Travelling to one's personal destination by her own route can often be lonely if not difficult. One who fears not the opinion of others is a definite, positive energy essential as an example for the rest of the company. Judy Richards demonstrates to her peers that she is uninhibited in her creativity and takes pleasure in her individuality.

A glance- I see you.
Try to recapture
but it is only
me again.
For a millisecond
my eye perceived
what the mirror
could but reflect,
leaving me to interpret what is now expanded to a simple idea.

To know, to understand,
to be.
Time, a thing of the present for it holds not the past in the untouchable world of crystalline sugar drops held in a mirror,
shattered, gone.
But in its shadowed corner of the light is reflected an energy behind our stance.

Sister Helena and Sister Deborah, Moderators and now, my friend! have you well fêted? did you taste the warmth of sun, let it flow from the tip of the tongue to surround the heart?

did you cry tears for a world lost to tomorrow?
and the laughter? did it swirl and sparkle, catching and reflecting through you?

in a collection of dreams and the shadow of their days, an idea
shall have been born
to light. yes! to you.

yes! to you!
